English Cheesecake Company Red & Black Velvet Cheesecake Cupcakes

Scrum-diddly edibles for the Easter table.

Taste Test by Emily Hirschmann

I don't think that there's ever a time when I really hate my job, but there are certainly times when I love it... Sitting down with a boxful of umptiousness ready for the devouring and calling it work? Who would ever complain? Cleverly combining two of the UK's favourite desserts, the English Cheesecake Company are ready to offer the ultimate in sweet-toothed indulgence; Red & Black Velvet Cheesecake Cupcakes... And it falls to me to test them!

Handmade cupcakes filled with delicately creamy cheesecake, topped with swirling cheesecake frosting and an extra sweet treat at the summit, could there be a more decadent dessert? Despite the obvious onslaught of calories, there is a surprising lightness of touch to these little cakey chaps; the sponge is airy, the filling melt-in-the-mouth and the topping whippy and delightful. The flavours are balanced and caress the taste buds without overwhelming, leaving you satisfied rather than sickened and the overall impression is one of goodness, creamy, creamy goodness. The Red & Black Velvet flavour selection includes Chocolate Brownie, Chocolate Cookie Crumble and two varieties of Red Velvet, with raspberries secreted in their soft-centred hearts. I guarantee that the first mouthful will make you groan.

The English Cheesecake Company have been delivering deliciousness since the 1980s, so they've had time to get things right. I would perhaps be doing a level of disservice to their other goods were I to say that with their Red & Black Velvet Cheesecake Cupcakes they must surely have reached the pinnacle of their culinary endeavours, after all, I felt similarly after working my way through one of their Irish Cream Chocolate Profiterole Smash cheesecakes the Christmas before last. For me, however, these are IT; plated pudding perfection.

Easter, for some people, is all about tradition and religion, for me it's all about gathering the family for a decent feed. While many will be drawn to the habitual Simnel cake, my table will be graced with cheesecake.
